George V, Royal Mint London, proof Waitangi crown, 1935. Toned, FDC and rare.

$10,000

Ex Noble Numismatics Sale 91 (lot 798) and from the Allan Sutherland Collection.

In Royal Mint card box (manufactured for the British 1935 specimen crown) as supplied to Sutherland, 'Proof NZ Crown, specially sent to me by Sir Robt. Johnson, Deputy Master, Royal Mint' in Sutherland's hand on front of box. Together with a copy of page 2 of a letter from Johnson sent with the coin. In the letter Johnson expresses his regret at being unable to supply Sutherland with a 'trial' piece but offering him this 'specimen' strike to 'allay your disappointment'. The 'trial' refers to the unauthorised version or 'pattern' Waitangi crown. Sutherland's hand written note in the letter's margin states 'I actually handled the unauthorised coin with Sir Robt'. Sutherland visited London and the Royal Mint in the early 1930s.

Daniel Charles Solander (1736-82), botanist. Born in Sweden, Solander was a pupil of Linnaeus who recommended him to naturalists in England. In 1760 Solander came to England and obtained an appointment at the British Museum. In 1768 he accompanied Joseph Banks on Cook's voyage around the world. He also went with Banks to Iceland in 1772; in 1773 he was made Keeper of the natural history department in the British Museum. The flower behind the head of Solander on the obverse of the medal is a genus of 'Atrapoea' named Solander by the younger Linnaeus.

Edward Wilson 1813 - 1878. Born London 3 November 1813, son of a linen merchant. A failed business venture dissipated his inheritance and savings and in August 1841 he sailed for Sydney to try sheep farming. He soon moved to Melbourne and became interested in politics, agriculture and newspapers. In 1848 he bought the "Argus" for £300. He aired his political views through his paper and provided influential opposition to the La Trobe government. Wilson retired in 1855 and developed an interest in the introduction of European birds, fish and animals. In February 1861 he formed the Acclimatization Society as an offshoot of the Victorian Zoological Society and similar societies in the other colonies and throughout Victoria were founded through his influence and involvement. He continued to be active in public affairs until his death on 10 January 1878.

A report in The Maitland Mercury and Hunter River General Advertiser on Tuesday 14 December 1875, page 3 on the events at an entertainment function staged at Paterson stated as follows. PRESENTATION OF MEDALS TO THE BOAT'S CREW OF THE MARCH FLOOD -During an interval of the above entertainment, Dr. Park, the Warden of the Paterson District, rose from his seat, and ascended to the platform, and said he had a pleasing duty to perform - that of presenting medals to those gallant young men who formed the boat's crew, and who so strenuously exerted themselves in saving life and property during the disastrous flood of last March. It gave him (Dr. Park) great pleasure to make the presentation. If it had not been for these young men exerting themselves to the utmost, during the rising of these mighty waters, no doubt lives would have been lost, and a great deal more valuable property destroyed and swept away than there was. These men risked their lives amidst the roaring and rising waters in saving life and property and it is due to them as residents to in some way recognise these valuable services so generously rendered.

The residents of this town and its vicinity agreed with him, Dr. Park, that some memento of their appreciation of their great services on this memorable occasion should be presented to the gallant crew. At a public meeting of the inhabitants, held sometime after the flood, a committee was appointed to collect subscriptions, and in some way to publicly record their deep sense of thankfulness to the boat's crew for their strenuous exertions, and laudable endeavours in saving life and property during the most disastrous flood that ever swept through the valley of Paterson. The presentation of these medals is the result of the committee's labours. He hoped the recipients of these medals would not look upon them merely in reference to their intrinsic value, but as conveying to each of them publicly, the deep sense of the obligation under which the inhabitants of this town considered themselves to lay to this gallant band of men on that ever memorable occasion. Dr. Park then called upon Sergeant James Wells, Constable William Mayo, Thomas Lindsey, and Joseph Maginness, and presented each with one of the medals.

On each individual presentation, those present in the room manifested their approval of the act by loud applause. There was also a medal provided for Mr. James Burns, and Mr. Boyle White, who, with the above, formed the principal members of the boat crew on the occasion of the great flood. The two after parties were absent on this occasion, but the medals will be sent to them. Mr. Lindsey expressed, his thanks for the kind appreciation of the services on the occasion referred to, they considered they had only done their duty as men, in saving the life and property of their neighbours around, and the kind present of the Medals would be to them far more grateful token of acknowledgment of their Services on the occasion, than any other gift, which could be tendered to them, as they could hand this down to their children and future generations, as the general token of acknowledgment of the inhabitants of this town for their services on the occasion. Again I thank you for the kind present which you have now presented to us. Sargeant Wells also briefly acknowledged the presentation in similar terms. This closed the presentation.

The medals which presented were very chaste, and very neat, and highly appropriate to the occasion which they commemorate. They are of solid silver, a little larger than a five shilling piece, the edge or outer line is of twisted silver, the centres are plain, and are of polished silver, and each contains the inscription which is most beautifully executed. On the one side is the following :- "The residents of the Paterson district, to Sergeant James Wells," on the other side :- "in grateful remembrance of his exertions during "The great Flood of March, 1875." On the upper edge of the medal, forming the receptacle for suspending the medal when worn, is some very artistic ornamentation. At the back, is a beautiful vine shewn, which adheres to the rim, in front of which are a couple of anchors crossing each other - with three separate coils of rope - all of which are of frosted silver. And when I say that the medals were from the workshop of the Messrs. Hardy Brothers, the famed Jewellers, of Hunter Street, Sydney, it will convey some guarantee of the excellency of the workmanship, the beauty of the design, and the appropriateness of that which it is to commemorate.

$1,000

Details of the shipwreck were reported in The South Australian Advertiser on 20 July 1876 as follows,

'In Tuesday's issue we gave some particulars of the wreck of the barque Agnes on Carpenter's Reef, between Rivoli and MacDonnell Bays. It was stated that the vessel, which was laden with coal, was a total wreck; that four of the crew had succeeded, under perilous circumstances, in reaching MacDonnell Bay; and that five men, including the master (Captain Schmidt) and the first and second mates, were left on the wreck, and were in imminent danger, the craft being nearly all under water, and likely at any moment to go to pieces. It was considered to be possible that the men might be saved, but scarcely probable, unless the weather should be very calm and circumstances generally prove favorable. The position of affairs pointed to the necessity of immediate steps being taken, and the authorities showed their ability to cope with such an emergency by prompt action.

The steamer City of Hobart, which by good fortune happened to be in MacDonnell Bay, was chartered to proceed to the scene of the wreck with the local lifeboat and its crew. This she did, and at dawn of day on Wednesday the lifeboat was making its way across the wild waters to the wreck to rescue the men on it. They must have passed a fearful night exposed to the elements and unaware of what was being done to save them from the death which seemed so near. Through the heroic conduct of the crew of the lifeboat, all were saved, and this highly gratifying result could not have been accomplished without considerable personal risk. The brave men who constituted the crew, of the lifeboat, and rendered such efficient service, are deserving of all honor. A deed of so much nobleness should not-and we are quite sure it will not-be readily forgotten.

The following telegram, which we have received through the courtesy of Mr. W. T. Jones, the Sub-Collector of Customs at MacDonnell Bay, gives, in simple and concise language, a graphic description of the rescue:- MacDonnell Bay, July 19, evening.

"The steamer City of Hobart left here this morning, at half-past 3 o'clock, and arrived off the wreck at 7 a.m. The master of the Agnes, observing the steamer's lights, succeeded in turning a blue light to show his position, which was immediately answered by the steamer. The lifeboat left the steamer at a quarter-past 7 o'clock. On arriving at the wreck the Agnes was found to be lying on a ledge of rocks, broken in two, and split fore-and-aft. The mizenmast went by the board as the boat came up, and the men were seen holding on to the cabin fittings, the sea making a clean breach over the vessel. Much difficulty was experienced in approaching the wreck near enough to get the men off.

At last one of the crew of the Agnes stripped himself partially, and having fastened a line round his body, jumped into the sea and swam towards the boat, in doing which he was repeatedly engulfed by the tremendous seas running and was also much cut and bruised. At last the coxswain of the life-boat hove the swimmer a life-buoy with a line attached to it, which he succeeded in catching, and by it was hauled on board. The remainder of the crew were saved in like manner by jumping into the sea and catching the life-buoy. It was providential that the line did not part during this service, as three of the crew, not being able to swim, must inevitably have been lost. The life-boat returned to the steamer at 10 o'clock, where the shipwrecked men received every attention from Captain Evans, who supplied them with every necessary. The steamer at once started for Port MacDonnell, and arrived here at half-past 12 o'clock. Captain Evans states that the lifeboat's crew behaved admirably, and that much praise is due to the coxswain, Mr. Smith, for the creditable manner in which he handled the lifeboat. He also says there is no doubt that by this time not a vestige of the Agnes remains above water."

The names of the men who succeeded in getting ashore from the Agnes, are Zachariah Nicholas, William Thomas, John Trickett, and John Pink; and the names of those who were rescued from the wreck are Hans Schmidt, master; Alfred Holland, mate; Alfred Adler, second mate; Edward Ulster and Charles Jones. We understand that the vessel was insured for £2,000 in the National Marine Office, and that before she left Sydney £700 was expended in refitting her. The owner Mr. P. Manuel, of Port Adelaide, states that the craft was properly equipped with boats, and that it will be found there is no ground whatever for complaint in that particular. We shall be very glad if that turns out to be the case.

During Wednesday afternoon Mr. Manuel received a telegram from Captain Schmidt informing him that the crew were saved with their lives only, and enquiring whether he should discharge them at MacDonnell Bay. Mr. Manuel replied giving instructions for the men to be brought on to Port Adelaide. We have already spoken in high terms of the prompt action taken by the authorities in this case, and they are without question deserving of the warmest eulogy. The President of Marine Board, acting in conjunction with the Treasurer, made, without a moment of unnecessary delay, the best possible arrangements, and to the speedy and gallant way in which they were carried out, Capt. Schmidt and his companions are largely indebted for their lives.'

A further report by the same newspaper on 17 May 1877 under the heading of Presentation for Bravery stated, 'An interesting ceremony took place in the Executive Council Chamber on Wednesday morning, May 16, when His Excellency Sir W.W. Cairns presented to Mr. William Alfred Holland the silver medal and parchment certificate of the Victorian Humane Society, for his bravery in saving the lives of the captain and crew of the barque Agnes, which was wrecked on Carpenter's Reef, between Rivoli and Macdonnell Bays, on the 19th July, 1876.' Details are then given of the rescue and the presentation ceremony and names of the official guests. The paper then reported, 'Mr. Holland is also the possessor of a gold medal which was presented to him some time back by the owner of the Agnes for his gallant conduct on the occasion which has called forth this well-merited tribute from the Humane Society of Victoria.'

Another gold medal was issued to the lifeboat coxswain H.L. Smith. These gold medals as well as silver medals were awarded to the 12-man crew of the rescue lifeboat Percy by the owner of the barque Agnes, Mr Manuel.

Awarded for breeding of Angora goats and the experimentation with ostrich farming. Sir Samuel Wilson (1832-1895) was born in Ireland and moved to Victoria in 1852. He was a pastoralist and politician whose vast holdings of land and stock had never been seen before in Australia. He worked with the Acclimatization Society and donated 30,000 pounds to the University of Melbourne to build the gothic Wilson Hall. Governor Sir George Bowen, in recommending him for a baronetcy in 1874 estimated Wilson's annual income as almost one million pounds. He retired to England in 1881, where he continued his political work before dying in 1885.

James Joseph Giltinan was born on 30th August 1866. He evolved into a good all round sportsman as evidenced by the cricketing awards offered here for auction. Giltinan was also a cricket umpire officiating in representative cricket matches. He developed an entrepreneurial flair and in this mode he helped to found the sport of rugby league football in Australia.

On 8 August 1907 at Bateman's Crystal Hotel, George Street, Sydney politician Henry Hoyle chaired a meeting of fifty interested persons, including several leading rugby players and officials such as Giltinan's friends, the great cricket player Victor Trumper and Rugby immortal 'Dally' Messenger. The New South Wales Rugby Football League was thus established and J.J.Giltinan was elected its first secretary. The next year he was appointed to lead the first Kangaroo tour to England in 1908. At the beginning of the 1909 NSWRL season, Giltinan, Victor Trumper and Henry Hoyle, founders of the League, were kicked out. In the same year, Trumper, with Giltinan and others, formed a sports and mercery store in George Street, near Sydney's Wynyard Station.

In 1935, Giltinan formed a breakaway from the established Sydney Flying Squadron to be known as the Australian 18 Footers League. Two years later in 1937, as the League's Secretary, James J. Giltinan planned a world's championship for 18 foot open boats. In 1938 the League inaugurated a trophy, popularly known as the J.J.Giltinan Trophy, to celebrate the event which is regarded as the world championships for the spectacular 18ft Skiff class and is contested each year on Sydney Harbour.

James Giltinan died in 1950 and in his honour the NSWRL established the J.J.Giltinan Shield. From 1951 to 1996 this rugby league trophy was awarded annually to the winner of the New South Wales Rugby League Grand Final, replacing the Labor Daily Cup. Since 1997 the J.J.Giltinan Shield has been awarded to the competition's minor premiers.

Born in Australia on 6 December 1892 Colonel William Alexander Camac Wilkinson DSO, MC and Bar, GM was a British Army officer and a first class cricket player in England. In 1922 he toured with the MCC to Australia and New Zealand. He played for various military teams and in 1933 he played twice for Egypt captaining the team against HM Martineau's XI. He also represented against Ireland in 1935 and 1937, against Canada in 1936 and against Scotland in 1939. Cricket was not his only sport. He represented The Household Brigade at Golf and played for the Harlequin's Golf Club.

Educated at Eton College in England, SCEGS in Sydney, Australia and then he attended Oxford University from 1910-1914. He was outstanding at school and university sporting competitions as evidenced by the medals on offer in this lot. He was commissioned a second lieutenant in the British Army on 18 August 1913. During WWI he was awarded the Military Cross and Bar. He was recalled for WWII and was awarded a DSO for the Battle of Monte Cassino and also a George Medal after several of his men had been killed or wounded after straying into a minefield and he single-handedly retrieved a soldier from deep within the minefield.

From July 1945 he was appointed as Senior Military Government Officer in the occupation forces in the British Zone in Austria, based in Graz, where he was noted for his regular local radio broadcasts in German. Colonel Wilkinson died on 19 September 1983 in Sussex, England. With research.

Arthur John Alfred Baldock (1898-1950) author of Paradise Lost: And Its Critics, published 1961. In the Sydney Morning Herald, tuesday 12 June 1934, page 8 it was reported, 'The Senate of the University of Sydney at its meeting yesterday elected Mr. A. J. A. Waldock, lecturer in English, to the chair of English Literature, which has been vacant since the death of Professor J. Le Gay Brereton in February, 1933. The committee of advice in England and within the University concurred in recommending Mr. Waldock on all essential grounds.'

Professor Waldock is the son of the Rev Dr. A. J. Waldock, of Canberra, and a graduate of Sydney University. He took his B A degree in 1918, with first-class honours in English and history, won the Coulson and James Coutts scholarships for English, and the Fraser scholarship for history. He graduated M A in 1925, again taking first-class honours and the University medal. He was appointed an Instructor in English on the staff of the Royal Australian Naval College Jervis Bay, but after a few months returned to the University as a lecturer in English. He has since held that office, and has attained a high position in Australian literary scholarship.

Professor Waldock's chief publication is 'Hamlet - A Study in Critical Method,' about which the chief Shakespearean critics have spoken appreciatively. An equally striking achievement was Professor Waldock's 'Thomas Hardy and the Dynasts,' written as a lecture for the Australian English Association and printed only in that association's series of leaflets, but now being sought for republication in England.

Both Professor Waldock and Professor Le Gay Brereton were pupils of Professor Sir Mungo MacCallum, and the tradition of the School of Modern Literature studies created by him will, therefore, continue.'

Together with Evidence of Australian Citizenship, a coloured document for William Greville Cross; large photo of rowing team to Berlin Olympics; photos and letter of thanks from the TV show, 'This is Your Life' thanking Bill Cross for participating in the tribute show to Merv Wood; letter of reference from the NSW Commissioner of Police to W.G.C. Cross on his retirement after over 38 years with the New South Wales Police Force with his final rank of Inspector 1st Class; Certificate of Discharge from New South Wales Police Department for W.G.C. Cross and signed personally by Commissioner of Police, Norman Allan.

William Greville Crossley Cross was the son of William Alfred Cross who was awarded a DCM for Gallipoli. He was born at Dunedin, New Zealand on 22 March 1908. He moved with his parents to Australia prior to 1914. He served in the New South Wales Police Force from 16 January 1930 to 21 March 1968 and was a member of the N.S.W. Police Rowing Club. One of his teammates was the legendary Olympic rower and fellow police officer, Mervyn Wood, who rose to the rank of Police Commissioner. In 1935 William Cross was also a member of the team that won the 53rd Men's Interstate eights Championship - The King's Cup. The eights rowing team selected to represent Australia at the Berlin Olympics was only selected on the basis that funds were sourced from outside the normal revenue sources of the Olympic Federation. The NSW Police Rowing Club came to the fore and raised funds via the NSW Police Federation and the police force itself by putting a levy of two shillings each on every NSW policeman's wage. Police superintendent George Ferguson, father of one of the selected rowers, Don Ferguson, was instrumental in raising the necessary funds and travelled to Berlin as the unofficial team manager.

See lot 3995 DCM group for Gallipoli to his father W.A. Cross.
