William Henry Warren was born at Bristol, Somerset, England and educated at the Royal College of Science, Dublin, and Queen's College, Manchester. He won the national prize in science awarded by the Science and Art Department, the prestigious Whitworth scholarship and the Royal Society of Arts technological scholarship. In 1872 he entered the service of the London and North-Western Railway Company and spent five years at its workshops at Wolverton. Warren migrated to Australia in 1881 and entered the Public Works Department at Sydney on 9 May 1881 and was placed in charge of the supervision of roads, bridges and sewerage. In 1883 he was appointed lecturer in engineering at the University of Sydney, and a year later was made professor of the new department. In 1890 he was made John Henry Challis professor, a professorship established in honour of John Challis, an Anglo-Australian merchant, landowner and philanthropist.

In 1885 Warren sat on the royal commission on railway bridges, and in 1892 was a member of the committee of inquiry on Baldwin locomotives. He was later chairman of the electric tramways board and was on the automatic brakes board and for many years he was consulting engineer to the Government of New South Wales. Warren was a member of the council of the Royal Society of New South Wales for many years, was inaugural president of the Institute of Engineers of Australia, Australian representative of the Institute of Engineering in Great Britain, and a council member of the International Society for the Testing of Materials. During World War I, he conducted over 10,000 tests of munition steel.

Between 1887 and 1921 William Warren wrote several books and numerous papers on timbers as well as engineering construction. He resigned his professorship at the end of 1925 and was made emeritus professor but shortly after he died suddenly at Sydney on 9 January 1926 and was buried in the Anglican section of Waverley Cemetery.

Robert Hollis was born on 14 January 1851 at Field Head, Belper, Derbyshire, England. After working for about 20 years with the Midland Railway Co. and being involved in various political and social movements, he became disenchanted with the whole system and decided to move to Australia arriving in New South Wales in 1884. He joined the Department of Railways in January 1885 as a fireman and soon was heavily involved in the trade union movement. The depression of the 1890s and the merciless anti-unionism of Chief Commissioner E. M. G. Eddy resulted in Hollis's resignation from the railways in 1893. He then turned to politics as a means for restoring the industrial gains made by unions in the late 1880s. He was prominent in organizing the first Labor League at Newtown, Sydney and after several attempts he won the State seat of Newtown-Erskine, an inner suburban working-class electorate, for Labor in 1901. In 1916 he supported conscription in defiance of his electorate and as a result he was expelled from the Political Labor League in November 1916. In the March 1917 election, Hollis, stood as a Nationalist and was defeated. He then devoted himself to benevolent work and was a director of Royal Prince Alfred Hospital for the period 1913-33. He died in the Masonic Hospital, Ashfield, on 25 May 1937 and was buried in Rookwood Cemetery.

Catrine Public School, award medal, Donor The Late W.G.Murray Esq, Sydney, New South Wales, undated (1914-15), in silver (45mm), hallmarked for Birmingham 1914 by maker J.C & S (Joseph Cook & Son Ltd), with suspension ball and ring, reverse inscribed, 'Awarded To/Master Willie Gibb/For/Religious Knowledge/Session 1914-15/John Monie, F.E.I.S./Headmaster'. Nearly uncirculated and scarce.

Catrine is a village in East Ayrshire, Scotland. John Monie was appointed a teacher at the school and in the local directory of 1903 he was listed as Headmaster and a member of the School Board. He died at Catrine on 1 June 1928 and is buried at the Catrine Cemetery.

It seems that the origin of the medal offered here arises from the return in 1894 to Catrine of Mrs Haldane Colquhoun Murray (nee Turriff), the widow of William Gilmour Murray and it seems that she has made an endowment to the school to award this medal in honour of her late husband. William Murray had arrived in Melbourne in 1853 and was the first honorary auditor of the Alfred Hospital. In 1875 he opened the Sydney office of the shipping firm of Gibbs, Bright & Co. A widower, Murray married Haldane Turriff on 6 March 1880. In 1886 Murray was also appointed to the board of the Australian Mutual Provident Society.

Haldane Turriff had been born at Paisley, Renfrewshire in Scotland on 12 January 1834. In August 1866 she entered the Nightingale Training School attached to St Thomas's Hospital, London, and was selected as one of the five nurses to accompany Lucy Osburn to the Sydney Infirmary and Dispensary in December 1867. A week after her arrival in Sydney on 5 March 1868 on the Dunbar Castle there was an attempted assassination of the Duke of Edinburgh and she was one of the two nurses who cared for him. Her nursing career makes for interesting reading and it is probably no coincidence that she was the first matron of Melbourne's Alfred Hospital (1870-80) where William Murray was the honorary auditor. Full details of Haldane Turriff's career are available in the Australian Dictionary of Biography.

William Murray died on 6 May 1888 and in 1894 his financially secure widow returned to her country of birth, Scotland, dying at Catrine on 5 February 1922.
