Described by Sear as a dupondius. In 27 B.C. the emperor conferred on this colony of southern Gaul the title of Colonia Augusta Nemausus and the initial issue with the heads of Augustus and Agrippa. It is dated by RPC to this time. The omission of the title Augustus on the obverse legend suggests a slightly earlier date. The issue went through several revivals over the next four decades with minor changes. The reverse type commemorates the conquest of Egypt in 30 B.C.

4664*

Tiberius, (A.D. 14-37), silver denarius, Lugdunum mint, issued A.D. 14-37, (3.48 g), obv. laureate head of Tiberius to right, around TI CAESAR DIVI AVG F AVGVSTVS, rev. 1982 Treasury Bill for $1.2 Billion

DOCUMENTS

4876*

Commonwealth of Australia Treasury Bill, No.R 002724 issued at Sydney (20th 'crossed out') 31th (sic) day of (May 'crossed out') March 1982 for Twelve hundred million dollars (written), and $1 200 000 000 (written at top left), payable to the bearer at the Reserve Bank of Australia at Canberra, Sydney, Melbourne, Brisbane, Adelaide, Perth, Hobart or Darwin on 30 June 1982, secured on the Consolidated Revenue of the Commonwealth of Australia, printed signature of John Stone, Secretary to the Treasury and penned signature of the Registrar of Stock, perforated PAID cancellation at each edge of bottom corners. One small stain at lower left and a few light creases, otherwise extremely fine and very rare.

$20,000

Treasury bills were issued by the Australian Government to provide short term loans into the Commonwealth Public Account, namely the Government's principal account held at the Reserve Bank in Sydney. When this Treasury Bill of $1,200,000,000 was issued, Australia was being led by Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser and the treasurer was John Howard. At this time Australia was in the grip of a recession with major deficit problems, rising unemployment, a major wage breakout, massive interest rates (standard home loan variable rate 13.5%) and inflation over ten percent.

It was in this climate that this large value Treasury Bill was issued and it is also probably the reason that the date of issue was moved forward from May to March, also probably so the Commonwealth could meet its commitment to the States.

This Treasury Bill was one of the last issued as a move to Treasury Notes was already underway and in June the tender system for Treasury Bonds was commenced. This move to a tendering system supported the Government being able to fully fund its budget without recourse to central bank financing.

Thus this Treasury Bill offered here is rare because of its high face value of $1.2 billion dollars, its scarcity and the probability that other examples of this value were destroyed.

Norman Lindsay was one of Australia's most famous artists and also an acclaimed author, one of his earliest stories being the children's classic, The Magic Pudding. Several of his books were adapted as movies or for television. During WWI Lindsay produced many propaganda and recruiting posters and cartoons for the Australian government. He was an editorial cartoonist on the staff of the Sydney Bulletin and many of his cartoons were of a political nature. He was also an etcher, sculptor and scale modeller. Norman Lindsay died in 1969 and is buried at Springwood Cemetery, in Sydney's Blue Mountains, not far from his former home at Faulconbridge which is now the Norman Lindsay Gallery and Museum.

In his above letter, Norman Lindsay is obviously replying to a suggestion by Holloway, as noted by Holloway on the envelope sent to him, and in part writes, 'If it suggests a picture I'll see what happens.' In paragraph two he writes, 'My last work for the Fanfrolico was Aristophane's 'Parliament of Women.' Fanfrolico was the publisher of this work and Norman Lindsay was the illustrator for the book when it was translated into English in 1929 with the illustrations featuring his famous nude images.

Lindsay also makes mention of his novel 'Redheap', published in England in 1930 but was banned in Australia for 28 years that is now regarded as a great literary classic. It was made into a TV series of the same name by the ABC in 1972. Lindsay writes, 'I have a warm feeling in N.Z at present, as it is the only spot in Australian waters that has accepted 'Red heap.' (his spelling) This place has banned the book and dumped it back in the publishers hands. With thirty years experience of the Australian wowsler I am still able to pump up a mild astonishment at his capacity in pure imbecility.'

Ronald Holloway, to whom Lindsay was writing this letter, was an English born Master Printer, operating his own printing business in New Zealand. He figures in a large number of Auckland-based literary biographies. After he died his requiem was held at St Patrick's Cathedral in Auckland on 4 November 2003.

Montague 'Monte' Thomas Archibald Wedd was born at Glebe, an inner western suburb of Sydney, NSW on January 5, 1921. During World War II he enlisted in the army, later transferring to the RAAF. After the war, he created a French Foreign Legion cartoon strip, Sword and Sabre, which appeared in the popular Middy Malone magazine.

In the 1940s and '50s, Wedd created several comic strips including one titled Captain Justice, the masked vigilante who fought bushrangers and 'righted all wrongs' in colonial NSW. As well as comic strips, Monty produced pulp-magazine covers featuring glamorous, scantily clad women, violent fights, or whatever other lurid scenes entered his imagination and the magazines would then find stories to match the covers. He also created the famous 'Dollar Bill' character for the Decimal Currency Board, used to teach Australians about the new decimal currency that was introduced in 1966.

In 1970 during the bicentenary Monty Wedd drew a popular comic-strip version of Captain Cook's journal for The Daily Mirror. This was followed by another, the Ned Kelly story. Yet another long-running historical strip, The Birth of a Nation, was syndicated to coincide with Australia's bicentennial celebrations in 1988.

Among his many other creations and works, including film animation, Wedd also drew Australian military trading cards for the Golden Fleece fuel company which used them as promotional items to sell petrol. He then turned the project into a reference book published in 1982 and titled Australian Military Uniforms 1800-1982.

In 1993 he was made an Officer of the Order of Australia, for his artistic achievements and for his work as an historian. He received the Stanley Award in 1987 and 1989 and then in 2004 he received the Silver Stanley Lifetime Achievement Award from the Australian Cartoonists' Association. Monty Wedd died at a nursing home at Fingal Bay, Port Stephens, NSW on 4 May 2012.
