$7,000

Together with a statutory declaration form descendents of Michael McCormick attesting that the above helmet and sword were worn by Michael McCormick and have been passed down through his line of descendents and are now the lawful property of the present ancestor who has legal title to sell them.

The above helmet and sword were worn and used by Yeoman Michael McCormick who was aide de camp to Major-General Henry Johnson, an Anglo-Irish general in the British Army and during the Irish Rebellion of 1798 he was detached with three thousand men to occupy New Ross, Wexford. When the rebels attacked New Ross on 5 June 1798 his force defeated the rebels in what was the hardest fight of the rebellion.

The 1798 uprising in Wexford was an event of great savagery and cruelty, mostly by the ill-disciplined forces of the State. It was undoubtedly the most, bloody episode in modern Irish history.

Michael McCormick is mentioned in at least five history books for his part in the battle. In 'The Year of Liberty, The Great Irish Rebellion of 1798' by Thomas Pakenham, p202, 'Johnson sent off his acting aide, a yeoman in a brass helmet called McCormick, to bring up reinforcements to seal the gap in the town's defenses.' Then again on pp204-5, 'His aide, McCormick, the man in the brass helmet, had a charmed life that day; finding himself alone, he cut his way to freedom through a hundred men. He was sent back once again to find Reinforcements. But neither of the officers he met - one with a cannon, the other with a troop of cavalrymen were prepared to join their general. At McCormick's news they fled rapidly back across the bridge.'

Another mention is in 'Ireland 1798, The Battles' by Art Kavanagh, p153, 'Another man of note in Johnson's retinue was a temporary aide de camp, a yeoman called McCormick. It was said that McCormick in the height of the battle got cut off and though surrounded by a hundred rebels he managed to fight his way out of the tight corner.'

In 'The People's Rising, Wexford 1798' by Daniel Gahan it states on p127, 'A detachment of troops was trapped in the lane for a short while by this movement, but they eventually escaped through a connecting alley, partly through the efforts of a flamboyant local yeoman in a brass helmet named McCormick.'

Then again in 'A Little History of St Mary's and its Memorials' by Joe Doran, p78, 'General Johnson's aide at the Battle of Ross was a man named McCormick in a brass helmet "worth 40 brave soldiers".'

Finally, in 'History of the Rebellion in Ireland in the year 1798' by Rev. James Gordon (1801), p119, '...while Major-General Johnson, the commander, a man of consummate courage and fervent exertions, aided by those of an extraordinary gentleman, an inhabitant of Ross, named McCormick, labouring to rally the discomfited soldiery.'

With a detailed history of Michael McCormick's descendents in particular those who immigrated to Van Diemen's Land in the early 1800s.

$1,000

Hamburger, Rogers & Co, Gold Lacemen and Military Contractors traded under this name from 1839.

In Hart's New Army List of 1844 it records under 4th (The King's Own) Regiment of Foot that Theobald Pepper Roberts purchased a commission, at the rank of Ensign 15Dec1840. He was appointed Lieutenant on 02Aug1844. He was the regiment's senior subaltern in the Crimea in 1854 and left the regiment in that same year after nearly 14 year's service. In the previous year he had been the centre of an affray between the military and the police in Edinburgh. While in civilian attire he was attending the annual gymnastics games when he was jostled by a young boy so he hit him with his cane but unfortunately the hit was to the head and drew blood. When police tried to arrest him, members of his regiment, who were in uniform, tried to stop the police and a major altercation ensued. None of the soldiers were injured but six police were wounded, two or three rather seriously. Subsequently, several soldiers were arrested and charged with assault. The charge against Lieutenant Roberts of striking a boy was remitted by the Sheriff.

In 1839 Theobald Pepper Roberts of Mota was recorded as a member of the Petit Jury to try between our Sovereign Lady the Queen and the Traversers, at a General Assizes and General Goal Delivery held at Nenagh in and for the County and Riding. In 1844 he was also recorded in papers of the House of Commons as a person qualified to serve as a juror in the Northern Division of Tipperary.

Sir Maurice Charles O'Connell, the elder (1768-1848) commander of forces and lieutenant-governor of New South Wales, was born in County Kerry, Ireland. He entered military school while in France and in 1792 he was appointed a captain in the French emigre forces serving on the French frontier under the Duke of Brunswick. After several years of service in various units with distinguished service, in 1806 he transferred to the 73rd Regiment attaining the rank of lieutenant colonel in May 1809.

In December 1809, the 1st Battalion of the 73rd Regiment under the command of Lieutenant Colonel O'Connell arrived at Port Jackson in Sydney accompanying Governor Lachlan Macquarie. The next month Lieutenant Colonel O'Connell was commissioned lieutenant-governor. Almost immediately, O'Connell began courting widowed Mary Putland, daughter of former Governor William Bligh. After a short courtship, and despite Bligh refusing to endorse O'Connell's request to marry his daughter, the couple were married at Government House on 8 May 1810.

During Governor Macquarie's absence in Tasmania in the latter part of 1812 O'Connell administered government in New South Wales. On his return, Macquarie arranged for the 73rd Regiment to be relieved and transferred it to Ceylon. O'Connell sailed with his regiment in March 1814 subsequently leading it in the war against the King of Kandy in 1815 and put down an uprising of the Kandians in 1817. In August 1819 he was promoted to colonel and in 1821 the regiment was recalled to Ireland. In July 1830 he was promoted to the rank of major general and in 1835 was knighted, being appointed Knight Commander of the Royal Guelphic Order (Military).

In December 1838 he returned to Sydney as the commander of forces in New South Wales. In November 1841 O'Connell was appointed lieutenant general, in December 1842 appointed colonel of the 81st regiment and in January 1844 colonel of the 80th Regiment. When Governor George Gipps left office on 11 July 1846, Sir Maurice O'Connell was acting-governor of New South Wales from 12 July to 2 August until the arrival of Governor Charles Fitzroy who took over on 3 August. In 1847 he was succeeded as commander of the forces in New South Wales by Major General Edward Buckley Wynyard. Sir Maurice was about to leave for England when he died suddenly at Darlinghurst on 25 May 1848.

Sir Henry Keppel GCB, OM (14 June 1809 - 17 January 1904) was a Royal Navy officer. His first command was mainly off the coast of Spain, which was then in the midst of the First Carlist War. He was promoted to captain on 5 December 1837 and appointed commanding officer of the corvette HMS Dido on the East Indies and China Station and was deployed in operations during the First Opium War and in operations against Borneo pirates. He later served as commander of the naval brigade besieging Sebastopol during the Crimean War. After becoming second-in-command of the East Indies and China Station, he commanded the British squadron in the action with Chinese pirates at the Battle of Fatshan Creek where he sank around 100 enemy war-junks. He subsequently took part in the capture of Canton during the Second Opium War.

Keppel went on to be Commander-in-Chief, Cape of Good Hope and West Coast of Africa Station, then Commander-in-Chief, South East Coast of America Station, Commander-in-Chief, China Station and finally Commander-in-Chief, Plymouth. He was promoted to Admiral of the Fleet on 5 August 1877, appointed First and Principal Naval Aide-de-Camp to the Queen on 9 March 1878 and retired in June 1879. He was among the original recipients of the Order of Merit (OM) in the 1902 Coronation Honours list published on 26 June 1902, receiving the order from King Edward VII at Buckingham Palace on 8 August 1902. Sir Henry Keppel died in London on 17 January 1904 and was buried at the churchyard of St Mary the Virgin in Winkfield.

Horace Millichamp Moore-Jones, an Englishman, who put down his age by ten years to enlist with NZEF in WWI, was a prolific artist. He produced many sketches until his drawing hand was injured. Wounded and declared medically unfit he was sent to England to recuperate and while doing so he produced about 80 watercolours of his war experiences. He returned to New Zealand in 1917 and toured the country showing his wartime paintings. In 1918 he painted the historic 'Man with a Donkey', the famous Simpson and his donkey image. He offered his entire war related collection to the New Zealand government but they refused to pay for it so he sold it to the Australian government and it is now in the Australian War Memorial. Moore-Jones died at Hamilton, New Zealand in 1922 from burns suffered while he rescued people from a fire at the Hamilton Hotel where he was a guest. He had escaped safely but returned to the burning building and helped save several people but in doing so he suffered terrible injuries to his own body.
