Handwritten Bill of Exchange, the third, issued at Augusta, May 28th 1832 by J.G. Bussell for £15.0.0 payable to Mr J.W. Turner, addressed to Captain Swanston, Bank Director, Derwent Bank, Van Diemens Land. Endorsed on back Pay Capt Pedder signed Jas W. Turner and W Pedder Captain 63rd Battalion. An important historical item linking Western Australia with Van Diemens Land. Good very fine and very rare.

$1,000

Ex W.J.D. Mira Collection.

This note fell due 'at sight' and passed to Pedder and was consolidated by Swanston of the Derwent bank. It is unique in the sense it was handwritten. Surviving bills of the Swan River Settlement and its offshoot Augusta in this early period are rare. It is from the Derwent Hoard found in the mid-1970s in Tasmania.

Lieut. William Pedder was one of two officers and 66 men of the 63rd Regiment who were assigned to garrison the Swan River Settlement and its extensions. The remainder sailed on to Van Diemen's Land.

The writer knows of three Bussell Bill of Hand specimens apart from this example; one to Turner 1832, this also has a Pedder endorsement; another to Malloy 1832 endorsed by Alexander Orr and one to Henty & Co. in 1835 endorsed to Henty & Co. signed Charles Henty to James P. Poynter. The three in 1832 may well be borrowings from Bussell's friends although any with broken values makes this unlikely. The Dictionary of Australian Biography records the family in a financially impoverished state in 1832; " their crops had failed for two years, their stock had strayed , they were dressed in rags and forced to live on grass and fish".

John Garrett Bussell ( 1803-1875) and three younger brothers, Charles, Vernon and Alfred plus a young servant Edward Pearce, migrated to the Swan River Settlement in the Warrior arriving at Fremantle on 12th March 1830. They travelled steerage! On the Warrior were three other families and their servants who were to hold significant places in the history of Western Australia.

These were the Captain Molloy entourage; he, his wife Georgiana , their servants, workers and their children. Molloy was a Londoner and veteran of the Peninsula War. He was seriously wounded at Waterloo and was awarded the MGSM with 8 bars. He became Resident Magistrate of the Augusta region.

James Woodward Turner; a wealthy builder and surveyor, his wife, seven children aged from three to 18 years along with their staff a total of 30. The workers would have all been indentured which obliged the master to pay, dress and feed them during their period of service. This caused problems as Turner and other masters gradually ran out of money.

Herring, John (d.1866) was granted 900 acres at Augusta; later he ran the postal service.

Was it a luxury cruise? Apparently not. The Warrior was 485 tons (the old Sydney Manly ferries Curl Curl and Dee Why were just under 800 tons), wood hulled and copper sheathed. Crewed by Captain Stone, 27 officers and seamen, four guards, 166 passengers (96 disembarked at the Swan) plus livestock, personal effects etc. The Turners were all in one portholeless cabin. The ablutions were not mentioned.

Several shiploads of settlers had arrived before the first land grants were declared "open for location" on 5 September 1829. Many of these went to military and government helpers. By the time the Warrior arrived in mid-March 1830, Governor Stirling informed the Bussells, Molloy and Herring that no new land grants of the size they desired would be made in the Swan environs. He advised them to go south to the Augusta region. They and others in the group were provided with 5 soldiers for protection.

The grants received were; Molloy 12,813 acres, Bussell 5,573, Turner 20,026 and Herring 900. Grants were directly related to the capital brought into the new colony either in cash or kind or both.

The cheap convict labour of the Eastern states did not begin until 1850 in Western Australia. It ended in 1868.

Clearing the hardwood timbers proved more than these settlers could manage with Bussell and Molloy eventually going north to the Vasse River, between Augusta and Perth. The Bussell holdings were to develop into the town of Busselton. Turner remained at Augusta until 1849 when he moved to Perth. He died in 1856.

The next name on the Bill is that of Charles Swanston (1789-1850). An ex East India Company Officer, merchant and banker Swanston arrived in Van Diemen's Land on the Success in 1829. He soon became a successful merchant, trader, agent and manager/director and virtual owner of the Derwent Bank in 1831. He joined with Robert Gellibrand to form The Port Phillip Company with a view to obtain large grants of land in the Port Phillip area. The government in Sydney would have none of this although smaller grants were made. He is remembered in the southern capital through his namesake, Swanston Street in Melbourne's CBD.

One name remains and he signed the bill twice; Captain William Pedder of the 63rd Regiment of Foote, the Manchester Regiment or the "Blood Suckers".

The ship Sulphur reached Cockburn Sound on 8th June 1829 and the next day elements of the 63rd Regiment (66 men, one officer, possibly Lieut. Pedder) under the command of Captain Irwin disembarked. Lieutenant William Pedder appears in the muster. He was given the task of supervising the transfer of government stores and equipment to Garden Island in Cockburn Sound. It is possible he was in charge at Fremantle until transferred per the Orelia to Van Diemen's Land in July 1830. In the Paymaster's records for September 1831 his name again appears but "at the Regimental Depot". He was appointed Town Adjutant to New Town 1832-33 and was transferred to India in December 1833. In 1844 he appears as Harbour Master in Hong Kong. His brother was Chief Justice of Tasmania.

The endorsement on the Bill of Exchange confirms his promotion and that he was acquainted with James Turner when the Bill was transferred. As noted above Bussell's finances were in a parlous state in 1832; the regular remittances from England failed to arrive and he was obliged to borrow from Molloy and possibly Turner. Could these be repayments of borrowings from his friends?

The Bill from Bussell to Molloy [1832] is for £ 17.16.11; this does not sound like a loan repayment; more like a specific purchase; the £15 is a possible loan repayment.

Turner must have endorsed the Bills, sent them to Pedder in Van Diemen's Land who signed once to accept the Bill and a second time to consolidate it through Charles Swanston, Director of the Derwent Bank. Pedder's involvement may well have been that of an Agent, not an uncommon practise at that time.

The detachment of the 63rd stationed in Western Australia was, according to the Perth Gazette, ordered to Hobart to join up with the bulk of the unit and sail to Madras. This did not happen and the Company embarked at Fremantle on the Merope in May 1834. Those leaving were Captain Erskine, Lieut. Carew and Lieut. McLeod, Surgeon Milligan, 4 sergeants, 1 drummer and 52 rank and file.

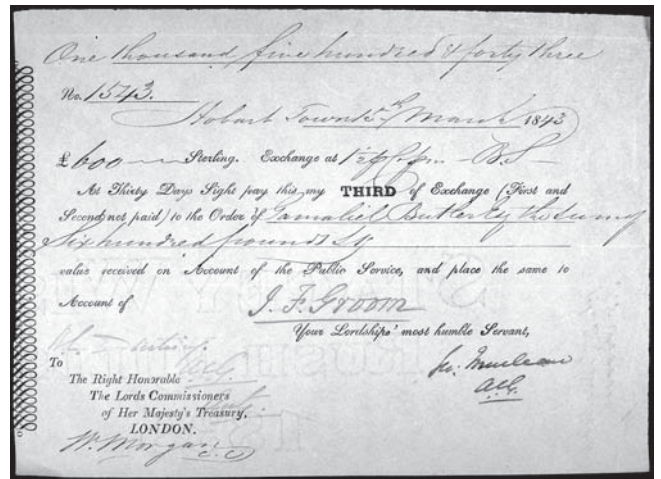

What happened to the 63rd? In India and Burma, between 1834 and 1847, the unit's deaths, mainly from Cholera, were: 24 officers, 51 sergeants, 24 corporals, 6 drummers and 604 privates. Capt. Carew is mentioned when the unit embarked at Moulmein in 1842. Cholera deaths in 1843 alone were: one captain, one subaltern, six sergeants, three corporals, one drummer and 72 privates along with Captain Carew's wife. The 63rd left for England in 1847.

James Kelly (1791-1859), sealer, pilot and harbourmaster, born in Parramatta, travelled extensively including some of discovery, including circumnavigation of VDL, and discovery of Port Davey and Macquarie Harbour. He was appointed as pilot and harbourmaster on the Derwent in May 1819. However in 1829 he resigned his position as harbourmaster and later as pilot and became engaged in whaling and with additional land ownership, became an important citizen in Hobart. He suffered some personal and shipping losses in the 1830's the period of these cheque forms and by the 1840's with the depression his losses were heavy forcing him to assign his property to creditors. He went back to work with the port authorities but died suddenly in April 1859. He was regarded as the "father and founder of whaling in Tasmania".
