Neinaber, E., "SMS Emden", oil on canvas, 410x615 mm, in old wooden frame, signed E.Neinaber, Hamburg, 1916 lower right in red paint,

$1,500

SMS Emden is a Dresden -class cruiser (3f/2m). L/B/D: 388 x 44.3 x 18 (118.3m x 13.5m x 5.5m). Tons: 4,268 disp. Comp.: 378-394. Arm.: 10 x 10.5cm, 10 mgs, 8 x 5.2cm; 2 x 18TT. Mach.: steam turbines, 16,350 ihp, 2 screws; 24 kts. Built: Kaiserliche Werft, Danzig, Germany; 1909.

Named for the Ems River city, the light cruiser Emden was commissioned in 1910 and assigned to the East Asia Cruiser Squadron stationed at Tsingtao. In August 1913, Emden was part of a four-power fleet dispatched to protect U.S., British, German, and Japanese interests on the Yangtze River. As the European crisis approached in 1914, Captain Karl von Müller took Emden out of Tsingtao on July 31; World War I began the next day. In the Strait of Tsushima, Emden captured the Russian mail boat Rjasan on August 4, and returned to Tsingtao two days later. The East Asia Squadron then quit Tsingtao, and on August 12 Vice Admiral Maximilian Graf von Spee steamed east for home waters with Scharnhorst, Gneisenau, and Nürnberg. Emden and her supply vessel Markomannia threaded their way through the Dutch East Indies and into the Indian Ocean. In the shipping lanes between Burma and India, Emden began capturing Allied shipping, sometimes at the rate of two ships a day. On September 21 at 2145, Emden stood about a half mile offshore and shelled the Burma Oil Company gas tanks in Madras. After a quick visit to Diego Garcia on October 9, where she narrowly missed an encounter with the armoured cruiser HMS Hampshire and the armed merchant cruiser Empress of Britain, she resumed raiding. On October 21, Emden ran into Penang and torpedoed the Russian cruiser Yemtschuk; later that day she also sank the French destroyer Mousquet. Next von Müller decided to cut the transoceanic cable at the Cocos Keeling Island northwest of Australia. On November 9, a detachment of about 50 men under Hellmuth von Mücke landed at Direction Island. As they destroyed the radio shack, the radio operators informed them that the Kaiser had honoured Emden's crew with Iron Crosses; the operators did not mention that they had reported the news of Emden's arrival. By this time, Emden had seized or sunk 16 merchant ships and was the object of a search by more than 75 Allied ships. At 0930, the arrival of the cruiser HMAS Sydney forced Emden to depart without the landing party. Emden opened fire at 0940 at a range of 5,600 yards. Sydney was able to keep out of Emden's range, and at about 1115 the helpless German cruiser was intentionally run aground on North Keeling Island. Emden's casualties included 141 dead and 65 wounded; Sydney suffered 4 dead and 12 wounded. Von Mücke and his landing party managed to steal the 97-ton copra schooner Ayesha and sailed to Pedang. From here they made their way to Istanbul. The telegraph reported the action as follows: "Yesterday morning (November 9th) news was received that the Emden which had been completely lost after her action with the Jemtchung, had arrived at Keeling Cocos Island and landed an armed party to destroy the wireless station and cut the cable. Here she was caught and forced to fight by "HMAS Sydney" under Captain John C.T. Glossop. A sharp action took place, in which HMAS Sydney suffered a loss of three killed and fifteen wounded. The Emden was driven ashore and burnt. Her losses in personnel are reported as very heavy. All possible assistance is being given to the survivors by various ships which have been despatched to the scene.

The Artist E. Neinaber was born in the late 1880's and moved to Berlin in 1905 and worked as a fashion designer. He painted and some works were published between 1912 and 1914, He became a central figure in German urban expressionism. During the war he served as a translator for French prisoners of war. In 1919 he participated in the first exhibitions of the November Group. He then distanced himself from expressionism, pursued a bourgeois life and reverted to orthodox Judaism. He married in 1927 and disappeared from public view as an artist, In 1933 he was exposed as a member of the avant-garde and for being Jewish. He was dismissed from his teaching position and interned as an "enemy alien". After his release he lived in great poverty in London. Returning to Germany in 1952, he continued to paint portraits, landscapes and still-lives, He died in 1966.

The Australian War Memorial (Canberra) advises that they know of no known original paintings of this vessel in Australia, although there are a small number of photographic prints produced in the early 1930's for educational purposes.

This painting is apparently the only known contemporary painting of this vessel in Australia and is of much historical and naval interest.

Sir Henry Parkes (1816–1896)

Henry Parkes was a politician and was premier of New South Wales five times. Born in England, Parkes had little schooling. He arrived in Australia in 1839, went into business and started a newspaper. He was interested in politics and wanted changes in the way New South Wales was governed. He was elected to the New South Wales Parliament in 1854 and helped introduce laws which improved hospitals and prisons and the lives of small farmers. Parkes began the first of his five terms as premier in 1872.

From the 1860s on, Parkes talked to people about the states joining together (federating). He was president of a convention (meeting) in 1891 to plan a constitution (set of rules) for a federated Australia. While this plan was not chosen, it was used later as a model for the final version. Parkes has been called 'The father of Australian federation'.

The town of Parkes in New South Wales is named after him and his portrait appears on Australian stamps. Parkes was buried at his own request without pomp at Faulconbridge in the Blue Mountains. Faulconbridge was his mother's maiden name. Parkes collected books and autographs, these three receipts appear to have been well preserved.

Ex Christie's (London) Numismatic Library. This is the most important work that describes with photographs the collection of coins from Tarentum that the owner spent most of his life acquiring. It is the largest collection of this type ever formed with the collection as the reference for description of Tarentine coins. The collection (now dispersed), collected by dies, contains 1881 coins. This the reprint edition is not as fine as the original edition is much superior. This book is essential to correctly identify dies for coins of this city. This book is indispensable to the collector of this series.
