Citation: On November 30th, 1907, Mr Stapleton was informed that his next-door-neighbour, a man named Cleaver, had shot at his wife with a revolver. On going inside, Mrs Cleaver asked him not to leave, as her husband would certainly kill her. While walking to the dining room, Cleaver came from the kitchen, and fired point blank at him, wounding him in the left breast. Despite the injury, Mr Stapleton bravely closed with the man, and succeeded in overpowering and disarming him, and subsequently assisted in conveying him to the lockup. Stapleton was then taken to the hospital and admitted for treatment.
