On roll as 3439 Thomas P Cook, St Vincent 14/3, Boy 3rd Class, Raven.

The sea battle of St Vincent was fought off the coast of Portugal between fifteen British and twenty eight Spanish 'Ships of the Line' in March 1797. Despite the odds against them, the British under Admiral Sir John Jervis won a decisive victory that gave them much better access to the Mediterranean. Nelson played a major part of the action however accompanying the fleet of battle ships were seven relatively unheralded frigates and sloops as support ships. On board the smallest sloop, the HMS Raven, served a young sailor named Thomas Potter Cooke, 3rd Class, an eleven year old whose duties during battle included carrying gunpowder from the magazine to the gun positions.

Thomas Potter (Tippy) Cooke was born in 1786, the son of a surgeon. When his father died in 1796 the ten year old Thomas volunteered for service in the Royal Navy and was soon serving on HMS Raven a newly commissioned sloop. The next year he found himself in the action at St Vincent. After this battle, Admiral Sir John Jervis (now Earl St Vincent) transferred his flag to a newly commissioned gun ship, Ville de Paris. Coincidentally the young sailor, T P Cooke, also transferred to the same ship. In March 1802 there was a pause in the war after the British accepted Napoleon's offer of conditional peace. During this period of quiet, young Thomas took the opportunity to gain his release from naval service and by 1804 had embarked on a new career as an actor.

He was soon very popular with the audiences in the theatres of the day such as Covent Garden and the Surrey, particularly his rendition of nautical themes what with his athletic six foot frame and naval experience behind him. Meanwhile, after many years of discussion, a Naval General Service Medal was finally authorized by Queen Victoria in 1847 to be issued to survivors at that date for various actions between 1793 and 1840. Of those involved in the Battle of St Vincent only 348 claimants were registered and of the total of 121 crew on board the Raven, only Thomas Cooke was listed to receive the Naval General Service Medal with clasp St Vincent.

Thomas Cooke's acting career prospered into his seventies. During his career on the stage he portrayed the lead in The Life of Nelson, Cpt Van Decken in the Flying Dutchman and created the monster in the original version of Mary Shelley's famous Frankenstein. In 1857 he appeared in a series of short plays in aid of Actors' Benefit organized by Charles Dickens. Cooke passed away in 1864 at the age of 78 and a prominent theatre critic of the day described him as 'The best sailor that ever trod the stage.'

MID: Fourth Supplement to LG 1/6/1945, p2852, to Chief Engine Room Artificer Francis Flynn, C/M.34688 (Sliema, Malta).

Recommendation for operational award to Ch.ERA Francis Flynn, HMS St Angelo: R.Y.S.Kumanovo left Malta for Sicily on the 26th December, 1944 with 100 passengers. En route she ran into very bad weather (wind E.N.E., Force 7-8 and very rough sea with heavy rain) and got into difficulties, eventually having to be abandoned on the afternoon of 27th December.

On hearing that the ship was in difficulties about 1000 on 27th December, Chief E.R.A. Flynn, who was a passenger on board, went to the bridge to offer his services. He then went down to the boiler-room where he found water up to the fire bars of the lower boiler and that the fires had been allowed to go out. He collected some Yugo-Slav stokers and in spite of language difficulties and reluctance on their part, managed to get them to assist in relighting the fires and raising steam. This work was continued until about 1530, when, as the pumps were blocked and no longer serviceable, nothing further could be done.

Together with Municipal Employees War Service Association 11 Nov 1919 medal (illustrated), uniface, in enamel and silver (38.5mm) with suspension and blue neck ribbon, obverse impressed, '1936/Fehrsen Dr. E.O.' Note the name on the various medals is in three different forms, namely Fehrsen (correct), Fihrsen and finally E.O instead of F.O.

Most volunteers to the Australian Volunteer Hospital which was raised in England were not Australians but rather from British or other Commonwealth countries.

Dr Frederick Oloff Fehrsen, born at Middelburg, Eastern Cape, South Africa, into a family of medical practitioners was raised at Somerset East where he attended Gill College. He then advanced to Stellenbosch University for a year and lived with his uncle, Professor John Marais. In 1911 he went to London to undertake his medical training at London Hospital.

When war broke out in 1914 he interrupted his training when he joined the Royal Army Medical Corps as an NCO and volunteered for service with the Australian Volunteer Hospital. After two years he returned to London Hospital to complete his training and qualified as M.R.C.S (Eng.), L.R.C.P. (Lond.) in 1916. After completing the required resident appointments he then joined the Royal Navy as Surgeon-Lieutenant. He served on the South Atlantic Patrol for the remainder of the war and returned to South Africa in 1919.

He was appointed Port Health Officer in Cape Town and soon after was in general practice at Beaufort West until 1925. He then returned to Cape Town as Port Health Officer and from then on devoted his life to public medical service. He qualified for a Diploma of Public Health at Cape Town University and was appointed to the position of District Surgeon, Cape Town for three years. He was then appointed Assistant Health Officer for the Union, holding this position at Pretoria for about a year after which he resumed his former post of District Surgeon, Cape Town. During the period of this appointment he was Lecturer in Medical Jurisprudence at the University of Cape Town. In 1931 he was appointed Assistant M.O.H. for the City of Cape Town, succeeding as M.O.H. in 1944, a position he held until his retirement in 1952. For the eight year period that he was M.O.H. he also held the part-time position of Professor of Public Health at the University of Cape Town and after his retirement was appointed Emeritus Professor.

Dr Fehrsen distinguished himself in epidemiological research. Two important areas of public health work that he was able to have implemented during his tenure were the introduction into Cape Town of compulsory pasteurization of the public milk supply and the establishment of the Central Dental Clinic where under-privileged persons of any race, sex or age could receive dental services free or within their means. After retiring from municipal service, Dr Fehrsen worked successfully for a number of years on the medical staff of the Valkenberg Mental Hospital, Cape Town right up until he became seriously ill. He was an active member of the Medical Association of South Africa and also a keen sportsman in rugby, cricket, golf and athletics in which he distinguished himself.

Dr Fehrsen died on 24 June 1958 at Rondebosch and Mowbray Cottage Hospital, Rosebank, Cape, after a short illness. His funeral service was conducted at St Saviour's, Claremont and at the Crematorium, Maitland.

MC: LG 27/10/1917, p11110, posn14; CAG 14/2/1918, p285, posn 30.

Recommendation: For conspicuous courage and devotion to duty. On the morning of 25th September 1917, Lieut. Collie was leading a convoy of pack mules up the Hooge Road when a large ammunition dump near Hooge caught fire, effectually stopping all traffic. By making a hazardous detour, however, he passed the place and took his ammunition to within about 1000 yards of the front line. Although his horse had been blown from under him and he himself badly shaken, he returned to Hooge for another supply. After suffering several casualties in men and animals he was forced to desist. In the evening an urgent message from the 15th Australian Infantry Brigade stated that all dumps in their area had been blown up. Transport was turned out and Lieut. Collie again led them. He got through to the Brigade dump, returned twice to Hooge, loaded up again, and carried the ammunition forward.

On the evening of 27th September, in leading a similar party forward from Hooge, nine men and a good many mules became casualties on the first trip. Despite this, Lieut. Collie and his men returned to Hooge for a second supply which they took to the Brigade dump.

His courage, energy and devotion to duty are deserving of special recognition.

CAFLSM: CAG No.29 3/5/1923 to W.E.Smith MC.

The only W.E.Smith awarded an MC in WWI was Captain Walter (Edmond, Edmund or Edward - in various service records with these variations to his second name) Smith, 53 Battalion. He was awarded the Military Cross for conspicuous gallantry in the attack on Polygon Wood east of Ypres on 26Sep1917. He was recommended for a DSO for the attack on Peronne on 01Sep1918 but was instead awarded a First Bar to his MC.

Walter Smith was born in 1895 at Newtown, Sydney; served 6 years with 31Bn Senior Cadets; served 6 months with AN&MEF with A Coy in New Guinea. Disch.04Mar1915; he was an engineer when he enlisted in AIF on 01Feb1916; WIA 19Jul1916 GSW hand and right thigh (severe) at Fleurbaix, France; also suffered frost bite, trench feet and was gassed; by 1921 he was a Major. His record shows he was awarded an Efficiency Decoration. By 1925 he was a Lt Colonel and served as such in WW2. This latter service history seems to conflict with the award of the CAFLSM. No WW2 record can be found for T.W.Smith with a service number of N15295.

In a letter date 15 September 1943 the RAAF wrote: 'On 12th, September, 1943, your son was rear gunner of an aircraft attacking Gasmata in daylight. The aircraft was seen to make its attack by the pilot of an accompanying aircraft, Flying Officer P.C.Gunson, and appeared to leave the target area in a normal manner. However, on the return trip, F/O Gunson encountered the aircraft flying on one engine and losing height approximately 30 miles out from Gasmata. The pilot gave a call saying his aircraft had been shot up and that he was about to make a forced landing on the water.'

The pilot carried out a most skillful landing and F/O Gunson observed all three members of the crew climb into the dinghy as the aircraft sank. They all appeared quite sound in body and there is no reason to believe that they suffered injury in any way. Chances of affecting a rescue when so far from base are remote and every effort expended by us proved fruitless. It is estimated that the dingy would have drifted onto the shores of New Britain within 24 hours and provided they landed where the Japs are not in occupation they will have moved into the jungle and will have every chance of escape.'

A later letter from the Casualty Section, Department of Air dated 8 January 1946 advised: 'A report has been received from an officer of the A.I.F., who was liberated from a Japanese Prisoner of War Camp at Rabaul that he saw your son and four other airmen at Rabaul in March 1944.'

The report continues that the Prisoner of War Camp was destroyed by bombing on 5 March 1944, and the Allied Prisoners were confined into a tunnel for a few days. Later forty of the prisoners, including your son, were removed by the Japanese, in two parties, and nothing definite is known as to their fate. The officer stated that he was informed by some Japanese that the whole party had been killed by Allied bombing while they were being moved to Waton Island. Other Japanese told him that some of the prisoners had died from illness and the remainder were killed by bombing. These stories are inconsistent, inconclusive, and have not been corroborated.'

Another letter dated 1 August 1946 stated that the remains of Flt Sgt G.R.Thomas were reburied in the Rabaul War Cemetery, New Britain.

Gordon Ronald Thomas, born 24Feb1921 at Norwood, South Australia; Enl.08Nov1941 at 5 Recruit Centre Adelaide for aircrew training and to 4 Initial Training School, Victor Harbour; 28Feb1942 Leading Aircraftman (LAC); 05Mar1942 to 1 Wireless Air Gunnery School (1 WAGS), Ballarat; 24Aug1942 to 3 Bombing and Air Gunnery School; 17Sep1942 Sergeant; 18Sep1942 to 4 Embarkation Depot; 12Dec1942 to 2 Air Navigation School, Parkes; 01May1943 Flight Sergeant; 29May1943 to 1 WAGS; 24Jul1943 to 1 Reinforcement Pool; 26Jul1943 operations with 22 Squadron (Boston) as Wireless Operator and Rear Gunner based at Goodenough Island; 26Nov1943 to Kiriwina; 19Jul1944 to Noemfoor; 12Sep1944 operations in aircraft A28-15 including strikes on enemy targets on Gasmata Island, south coast of New Britain; aircraft damaged by enemy fire and successfully ditched 30 miles south of Gasmata. The aircrew later located by natives and handed over to the Japanese at Malinglo Island on 15Sep1944 and taken to Gasmata as POWs; 08Oct1943 transferred to Rabaul and later interred at POW camp at Talili in early 1944; 05Mar1944 believed wounded as a result of Allied air raids while a POW (see details in RAAF correspondence above). Between 33 and 40 Allied personnel were killed in or as the result of the air raids. The airmen killed in these raids were cremated by the Japanese at Toma and the remains held until located by the Allies. They were then interned at Rabaul (Bita Paka) Military Cemetery, collective grave E.C5-11.

Bushie was Australia's first war dog. Hailing from Wentworth Falls in the NSW Blue Mountains area he was gang-pressed into service as a mascot with the New South Wales Bushmen's Contingent of February 1900. He was named by the Lieutenant Governor and had his portrait painted by renowned artist, Wollaston J.Thomas. Bushie was a reluctant transcript to South Africa, however, word of him reached Queen Victoria who let it be known she would be keen to accept him. Thus, at war's end, Bushie was taken to England to live out his life in the Royal household.

An important issue struck during the Carthaginian War c.310-306 B.C. The financing of Agathokles' war with the Carthaginians was provided by a series of three electrum denominations, 50, 25 and 10 litrai. Only the 50 litrai was produced in enough quantity to actually play a significant role in the war's financial operations. The gold content of the 50 litrai varies from 70% for the first issue to 30% for the later issues (examples of this die averaged 50%). This probably reflects a lack of booty from the campaign needed to provide the necessary bullion to finance the expedition.

Dionysios I or Dionysios the Elder (c.432 - 367 B.C.), was a Greek tyrant of Syracuse. He conquered several cities in Sicily and southern Italy, opposed Carthage's influence in Sicily and made Syracuse the most powerful of the Western Greek colonies. He was regarded by ancient writers as an example of the worst kind of despot-cruel, suspicious and vindictive.

In 288 BC, Lysimachos and Pyrrhos of Epiros launched a joint invasion of Macedon, which was then held by Demetrios I Poliorketes, and divided the country between themselves. Lysimachos controlled the eastern half, containing the strategically important mint of Amphipolis, which soon became his principal mint for tetradrachms. The output of the mint was huge, with many new issues still being discovered today. It remained under his control until his death in 281 BC.

Ex the Demetrios Armounta Collection.

After the defeat of Perseus at the battle of Pydna in 168 BC, the Romans divided Macedonia into four separate autonomous administrative regions (merides), the first (PRWTES) lay east of the Strymon with its capital at Amphipolis, the second (DEUTERAS) between the Strymon and Axios with its capital at Thessalonica, the third between the Axios and Peneos with its capital at Pella, and the fourth included most of Upper Macedonia with its capital at Heraclea Lyncei. Livy informs us that initially all commerce between the regions, exploitation of the silver and gold mines and the importation of salt were forbidden. Almost all the coinage of this period is struck in the name of the first region and runs parallel to the mass coinages of Thasos and Maroneia from about 158 BC. No silver is known from the third and fourth regions, and only a small number of rare tetradrachms from the second region. These four regions only lasted until 148 BC when the country was finally united to constitute a Roman Province and proceeded to issue coins under the authority of its legatus pro praetore.
