Original documents for the British occupation of Senegal, 1809, include;

1. Article of Capitulation, three pages written in French, setting out the nine conditions of surrender by the French, signed personally at 11am, 13 July 1809 by John Huddle (acting as Aide-de-Campe and possessing Full Power from Commodore Columbine, Commanding the Naval, and Major Charles William Maxwell, commanding the Land Forces of His Britannic Majesty, employed in the expedition against the Colony of Senegal, on the one part and M.Degrigny, Commissary of Marine, Administrator in Chief of Senegal, and M.Durecu, Merchant, possessing Full Powers from M.Levasseur, Commandant of Senegal, for the surrender of the Island of St Louis and its Dependencies on the other part; also signed by E H Columbine, commanding the Squadron of His Britannic Majesty, and C W Maxwell, Major of Infantry, Commanding His Britannic Land Forces; and at the end, viewed and ratified by the interim Commander-in-Chief Levallent.

2. Draft of a letter by Capt E.H.Columbine H.M. sloop Derwent off Senegal, July 20th 1809 to The Honourable W W Pole, Admiralty, giving a detailed account of the capture of Senegal, being five foolscap size pages with corrections and various other adjustments and additions to original text, as well as details of the British and French flotillas in the margins and appears to be removed from a journal or log book; written in the hand of and signed by E H Columbine.

3. Proclamation from Commander Columbine and Major Maxwell at Goree to the inhabitants of Senegal, being two handwritten documents, one in French and one in English, both of two pages, advising the inhabitants that the impending Occupation of Senegal is not directed against them but rather to relieve them from the oppression of French control so that their businesses can once again prosper without the heavy tax burdens but also stating that those aiding the French will be treated with all the rigours of war, property confiscated and themselves imprisoned.

These are important, historic, and rare documents in very fine condition.

Together with copies of London Gazette pages 1342-1345, which report on the above documents including an English translation of the Article of Capitulation and the final letter as drafted above by Commodore Columbine is reported under Letters on Service, Admiralty Office, August 26, 1809, in an abbreviated format as follows,

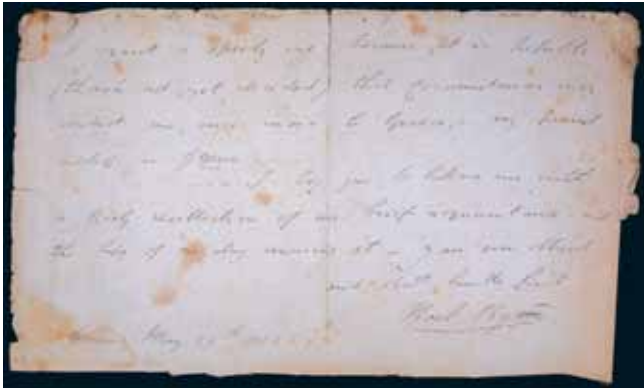

'A letter has been received at this office, from Capt. Columbine, late commander of his Majesty's ship the Solebay, addressed to the Hon. William Wellesley Pole, and dated on board the Derwent sloop, off Senegal, the 20th of July, 1809, giving an account of the surrender of that settlement to his Majesty's arms. Some depredations having been committed on the trade in the neighbourhood of Senegal, by small privateers fitted out there, Captain Columbine, and Major Maxwell, commanding the garrison at Goree, determined to make an attack upon the place, and proceeded against it on the 4th of July, with the Solebay, Derwent sloop, and Tigress gun-vessel, and some merchant and smaller vessels, having on board a detachment of one hundred and sixty men from Goree. The enemy at first appeared disposed to offer some resistance, but the detachment being landed, together with one hundred and twenty seamen and fifty marines, the enemy's force, consisting of one hundred and sixty regulars, and two hundred and forty militia, retreated, and on the 13th a capitulation was signed, by which the Island of St.Louis, and its dependencies, were surrendered to the British forces, the garrison being conveyed to France as prisoners of war, not to serve against his Majesty or his allies, until regularly exchanged. The only loss sustained by the English on this service, has been that of Captain Frederick Parker, of the Derwent, Mr.Francis Atterbury Senley, midshipman of that sloop, and six seamen, drowned in attempting to cross the Bar of Senegal.

Captain Columbine speaks in high terms of the conduct of the officers and men employed on the occasion. On the 11th of July, the Solebay, in moving up the river, got on shore and was wrecked, all her men and part of the stores were saved.'

George Gordon Byron, 6th Baron Byron, later George Gordon Noel Byron (1788-1824). Byron was an English poet and a leading figure in the romantic movement of his time. He was handsome, athletic, a competent boxer, horseman and excellent swimmer. He was and is widely read and influential in the English speaking world and beyond. Famous not only for his writings but for his life which featured extravagant living, numerous love affairs including rumours of a scandalous incestuous liaison with his half-sister and self imposed exile.

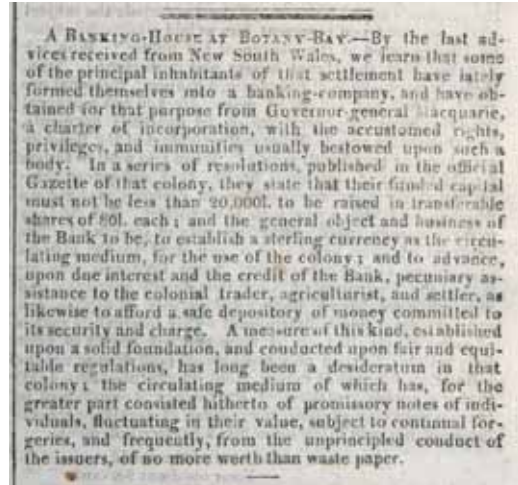

When Byron's mother-in-law, Judith Noel, died in 1822 her will required that he change his surname to Noel in order to inherit half her estate and so he obtained a Royal Warrant to do so. This Royal Warrant also allowed him to subscribe the said surname of Noel before all titles of honour' and from that point he signed himself as Noel Byron. There was some speculation that he did this so that his initials were NB thus mimicing those of his hero Napoleon Bonaparte.

It is significant that in the part letter offered here, Byron mentions that 'though not yet decided that circumstances may conduct me once more to Greece' because within six weeks he left Genoa for Greece to support it in its efforts to gain independence from the Ottoman Empire. While in Greece Byron fell ill on 24 February 1824 and despite a partial recovery in early April he became ill again and it is thought that as a result of poor medical treatment he finally died on 19 April 1824 in Missolonghi.

Since Byron only started signing his name as Noel Byron sometime in 1822 then this style of signature was only used for a relatively short period of about two years and hence must be considered extremely scarce.

The Polynesia Company was formed in 1868 with the object of utilising the vast resources of the Islands of the South Pacific by forming an institution upon principles similar to those adopted by the old East India Company. The operations would include banking, trading and the cultivation of cotton, sugar, coffee and other tropical productions. A charter was signed, by which King Thakombau, with the consent of his Chiefs, in consideration of the Company liquidating a debt due the US Government, and an annuity of 200 pounds per annum to him, ceded 200,000 acres of land to the Company and granted them exclusive banking privileges for 21 years with the right of issuing banknotes for the Islands, and an exemption from all taxation. To encourage early occupation of the Company's lands Free Grants were given to shareholders, with the possibility of also purchasing additional land at 7s 6d per acre.

Not only is this book scarce, it is the personal copy of Margaret Swann who lived with her family in Elizabeth Farm, the oldest building in Australia. Her father purchased the farm from the estate of General Edward Macarthur (Governor and Mrs Elizabeth Macquarie's son) in 1904 and the family remained in it until 1968. Margaret Swann and her family, with their appreciation of history, led to the preservation of Elizabeth Farm which is now an historic museum.
