Sir Herbert Henry Schlink (1883-1962) was born at Wodonga, Victoria on 28 March 1883 of German parents. He attended Wodonga State School, St Patrick's College at Goulburn, and St John's College at University of Sydney where he graduated M.B., Ch.M. (1907). Initially he was appointed to Royal Prince Alfred Hospital where he worked until he opened a private practice in Macquarie Street, Sydney in 1912.

He had been a member of the Australian Army Medical Corps Reserve since 1908 and was appointed Captain attached to 40th (Western Suburbs of Sydney) Coy. In September 1914 he was appointed CO of the Coy and in 1915 began duties at Liverpool Military Camp. Because this was an initial enrolment and training camp for WWI, allegations were made in Federal Parliament and following a Royal Commission into operations at the camp, Justice Sir George Rich reported on the 'impropriety and inexpediency of appointing an officer of German parentage'. As a consequence, despite Schlink's declaration of loyalty, he was removed from the camp, nonetheless remaining on the officer's list until 1919. Understandably, Dr Schlink was extremely upset and demoralised, particularly since his brother was interned in Germany as an alien.

Dr Schlink had a stellar medical career serving on various hospital boards and associations as well as written contributions to his chosen field of specialisation of gynaecology. He was knighted in recognition of his work in 1954. He died on 30 November 1962 and was buried at the Catholic section of Mona Vale Cemetery. His portrait is at King George V and Royal Prince Alfred Hospitals and there is also a bust by Andor Meszaros at Royal Prince Alfred Hospital.

The Imperial Camel Corps was formed in January 1916 to deal with the revolt of pro-Turkish Senussi tribesmen in Egypt's Western Desert. It had four regiments, each of about 770 men, the first and third Australians with many recruited from men of Australian Infantry battalions who had fought in the Gallipoli Campaign, the third was British and the fourth a mix of New Zealanders and Australians and at full strength it employed nearly 4,000 camels.

Australia's part in the Battle of Magdhaba on 23 December 1916 came under the control of Major General Harry Chauvel whose force for the attack on Magdhaba consisted of three brigades of the Anzac Mounted Division; 1st Light Horse Brigade (1st, 2nd and 3rd Light Horse Regiments), the 3rd Light Horse Brigade (8th, 9th and 10th Light Horse Regiments), the New Zealand Mounted Rifles Brigade (Auckland, Canterbury and Wellington Mounted Rifles Regiments), together with three battalions from the Imperial Camel Brigade in place of the 2nd Light Horse Brigade. These nine regiments and three battalions were supported by the Inverness and Somerset Artillery Batteries, Royal Horse Artillery, and the Hong Kong and Singapore Artillery Battery.

The attack was planned by Chauvel as one of envelopment of the Turks and their supporters who were blocking the allied route to Palestine. The Flying Corps provided assistance by spotting Ottoman defences and movements. The attack started at 0630 and by 1200 all brigades were heavily involved in the action. By about 1700 all organised resistance ceased and as darkness fell, sporadic firing petered out, while prisoners were rounded up, horses collected and watered at the captured wells. Then Chauvel rode into Magdhaba and gave the order to clear the battlefield. In an address to the troops after the battle, Lieutenant General Sir Phillip Chetwode commander of the Desert Column expressed his appreciation for the mounted rifle and light horse method of attack. He said that in the history of warfare he had never known cavalry to not only locate and surround the opponent's position, but to dismount and fight as infantry with rifle and bayonet.

On 9 July 1943 official notification was received in New Zealand that Allan Francis Mackay, medical practitioner was a prisoner in Changi, Singapore. In the Auckland Star, 24 September 1945 it was reported that sixteen released prisoners from Singapore arrived at Whenuapai in a RNZAF Dakota transport. One of these was Dr A.F. Mackay of Wellington. Dr Mackay stated that about 80 doctors were interned in Singapore and only about half a dozen worked on hospital duties. He said the rest did coolie work. Dr Mackay, the son of Mrs H.Mackay of Wellington was medical officer for a group of rubber plantations in the Malaya States from 1930 until the Japanese attack. He said that apart from routine face-slapping he saw no atrocities committed at Changi or Sime Road prison camps. Their diet was a starvation one and conditions were badly congested but otherwise they were fairly fortunate and escaped the treatment meted out elsewhere. In another newspaper report, Dr Mackay said of his internment that 'We had to bow to the brutes every time they passed, and if they did not like your looks they hit you on the face.'
