The National Library of Australia using the Argus newspaper Friday 27 July 1928 comments on this.

"Stamp Design Competition".

Mr. R. A. Harrison (was) first. Three of the first five successful competitors in the stamp design competition conducted by the committee of the International Philatelic Exhibition are Victorians. More than 100 designs were submitted from all parts of Australia, Great Britain, France, India, South Africa, and the United States, and five of the first seven successful competitors were Australians. (The awards were announced yesterday.

Mr. R. A. Harrison, of the Government note printing branch, Fitzroy, obtained the First award—a gold medal. His design embodied the King's head. The second place was taken by Mr. H. Perry, of Venusstreet, Caulfield, with a koala design, for which a silver medal was given. The third award (bronze medals) was shared by Mr. E. N. Broad, 50 Treen avenue, Barnes, England, and Mr. E. M. Horne, Tyne street, Gilberton (S.A.). The design submitted by Mr. Broad was of the King's head, and that submitted by Mr. Horne had as its base the kangaroo. The cockatoo design of Mr. J. Trevor, Nar-nar-goon, was highly commended. The designs of Mr. F. H. Burrell, sixth avenue, Joslin E. Adelaide (kangaroo and wheatfield), and of Mr. H. W. Barr, Nasik road, India (allegorical). Special bronze medals will be awarded to the three last-mentioned competitors. All the successful designs have been sub-mitted to the Postmaster-General's department with a view to possible adoption for use as Australian stamps. Should any design be accepted the author will be granted a premium of £25. It is considered possible that each of the first three or even four designs may be adopted.

Mr. Harrison, the winner, also won the competition conducted in 1926 for the Canberra stamp, and both he and Mr. H. Perry, the second prize winner, are officers of the Government note and stamp printing branch. Mr. Broad is on the staff of a firm of stamp printers in England, and Mr. Barr is the manager of the Indian Government printers. The judges of the competition expressed appreciation of the high average quality of the designs.

The judges were:-Mr. P. T. Berry, Chairman; Mr. James Murray (representing the Postmaster-General), Mr. John Ash (technical representative), Mr. J. S. Macdonald (representing Australian artists) and Mr. A. A. Rosenblum (honorary secretary of the International Philatelic Exhibition). The exhibition will be held at the Town Hall in October and November."

Mr. Broad submitted this design as his second entry in this competition. The owner paid many years ago $2000 for this drawing.

 $500
- Australia Post used world first technology to issue postage stamps of the Australian gold medal winners at the Sydney 2000 Olympic Games.
- By arrangement with SOCOG a digital image taken at the medal presentation ceremony was sent to Fuji Xerox at Mascot, New South Wales where it was combined with a pre-designed frame format under the auspices of an Australia Post official. Once accepted this was then transmitted to Fuji Xerox document printers in Sydney, Melbourne, Brisbane, Adelaide, Perth, and Canberra where a limited quantity of pre-perforated sheets were used to print the 'digital' stamps.
- Black backing sheets were interleaved as part of this production process and as they contained an offset image, were NOT supposed to be issued to collectors. Each state's sheet bore an identifying animal logo at bottom right (NSW is a platypus). Stamps were then despatched to 69 selected post offices throughout Australia for sale from noon the day after.
- The same image was transmitted to SNP Ausprint in Melbourne where similar sheets (with a different identifying logo) were printed for normal distribution and available on the second day after production.
- These sheets were purchased at the Olymphilex stamp & collectibles exhibition post office at Centrepoin in Sydney and the appropriate sport pictogram postmark applied once to each sheet. (Richard Peck 2002)

William Colenso was born in Penzance, Cornwall, he was the cousin of John William Colenso, bishop of Natal. He trained as a printer's apprentice then travelled to New Zealand in 1834 to work for the Church Missionary Society as a printer/missionary. He was responsible for the printing of the Maori language translation of the New Testament.

By July 1835, he had printed and bound 2,000 copies of the Epistles to the Ephesians and Philippians, as well as printing addition, multiplication, and shillings-and-pence tables for the schools. Then by 5 January 1836, he had composed and printed 1,000 copies of St. Luke's Gospel, as well as further material for the schools. In July 1837, Colenso printed the first Maori Bible comprising three chapters of Genesis, the 20th chapter of Exodus, the first chapter of the Gospel of St John, 30 verses of the fifth chapter of the Gospel of St Matthew, the Lord's Prayer and some hymns. During the year ending 31 December 1840, he had printed 10,000 Catechisms, 11,000 Psalms, other religious texts and material for the schools; as well as 200 copies of the "Government Gazette" for the colonial government.

He was ordained a Deacon on 22 September 1844 following his theological studies at St John's College, which was then located at Te Waimata mission.

He was an avid botanist; detailing and transmitting to Kew Gardens in England previously unrecorded New Zealand flora. He assisted Joseph Dalton Hooker when he visited the Bay of Islands from 18 August to 23 November 1841. In 1866, he was the first New Zealander to be elected as a Fellow of the Royal Society. He wrote several books, and contributed over a hundred papers to scientific journals.

He married Elizabeth Fairburn on 27 April 1843. William and Elizabeth Colenso worked at the Waitangi (Ahuriri, Napier) Mission from 1844. In the 1840s, from his mission station in Hawke's Bay, Colenso made several long exploratory journeys through the central North Island in the company of Maori guides with the aim of reaching the inland Maori settlements of Patea, in the Taihape region, and converting them to Christianity. His travels took him through trackless forest, over the high Ruahine Range and across the Rangipo Desert and past the mountains of Ruapehu and Tongariro to the shores of Lake Taupo. In doing so he contributed greatly to the European exploration of the central North Island. One of his journeys, between December 1841 and February 1842, was across the North Island and up to the Kaipara Harbour.

From 1845, Colenso undertook lengthy journeys every spring and autumn. In 1847, he travelled to Taupo then south to pass by the Tongariro and Ruapehu mountains. He visited regularly the Wairapara and Hutt districts, where he was frequently at odds with the European lessees of sheep and cattle stations such as Kelly, McMaster, Grindell and Gillies. In 1845, about a dozen sheep and cattle farmers had leased large areas of land from local Maori by mutual agreement. Maori owners regularly raised the annual lease fee to the annoyance of the farmers. The farmers regularly pressed Maori to sell land. Many younger chiefs were keen sellers but were thwarted by conservative older chiefs. The farmers also paid Maori to assist in building roads to help economic development. Colenso regularly counselled Maori against selling any land or helping build roads which he claimed would be disastrous for them. Colenso was especially vociferous about the farmers living with Maori women as their wives, without a Christian marriage.

Colenso also had strong views about drinking and horse racing which were a regular part of colonial life that Maori as well as settlers enjoyed. This put him in opposition to a wide range of New Zealanders. In 1847, Judge Chapman, Doctor Featherston, the bank manager McDonald and the merchant Waitt visited the Hutt valley. There was criticism of what was called "the malicious interference of Colenso".

His standing in New Zealand colonial society and the Church Missionary Society, along with his fervent hope of ordination, was lost when it was discovered that he was the father of a son (Wiremu) by Ripeka, the Maori maid of his wife, Elizabeth Fairburn Colenso, in May 1850. In November 1851, Colenso was suspended as a deacon and dismissed from the mission in 1852. In 1853, he was convicted of a technical assault over an argument about Ripeka and their son.

Following a long wilderness period during which he continued his botany work, he took an active role as a local politician in Napier. He represented Napier as the Member of Parliament for the Napier electorate from the 1861 by-election to 1866, when he retired. In 1871, Colenso was the speaker at the Hawkes Bay Provincial Council when Ngati Kahungunu had been persuaded by farmers, the Russell Brothers, that they could get their land back in what came to be known as the Repudiation Movement. Their chief Henare Matua had already pronounced all land dealing with both the crown and private sales illegal. The brothers persuaded Maori that legal action against large land owners such as Donald McLean would succeed. Colenso advised Maori not to take a legal path that would leave them deep in debt. Lawyer and later Government Native Minister John Sheehan who spoke fluent Maori, acted on behalf of the Repudiation Movement. Matua attempted to stand as an MP but lost and the movement, deep in debt, petered out.

He died in Napier in 1899, leaving two sons and a daughter. His son from Ripeka, Wiremu/William, left New Zealand for Cornwall, married a cousin and lived in Penzance until his death. His son from Elizabeth Fairburn, Ridley Latimer, attended Cambridge University, and finally settled in Scotland. His daughter Frances Mary married William Henry Simcox and settled in Otaki, New Zealand. Neither of his sons had surviving children - Frances had nine.

Today in his memory there exists 'The Colenso Society' which was founded in 2010 by academics and historians across New Zealand. The Colenso Society aims to "promote the study of the life and work of the Reverend William Colenso FLS FRS".
