$700

Felix Tanner, real name Charles Jackson, was born at Berrima, NSW in 1863. In 1887, by now a daredevil and a tight rope walker, he walked over the famous Kiama Ocean Blow Hole on a wire stretched high up in the air. It was in the next year that the steam ship Ajax got into trouble off Kiama. 'Felix' went out by boat with two other men and saved the passengers and some of the crew. The first and second officers and four crew had already taken the only lifeboat and saved themselves. For his efforts he was presented with an inscribed pocket watch.

Fasting Felix as he became known regularly went on public display in fasting mode in various locations in Australia and New Zealand, even appearing at the Melbourne Exhibition in 1890 where he finished his fast and lost 13 kilos in weight.

He became interested in circumnavigating the world and in December 1905 Captain Felix Tanner set out in 'Tanners Ark' from Wellington, New Zealand with a young sailor. The 'Ark' was in the shape of a barrel about 12 feet long and 6 feet wide and had two masts and inside there were two bunks. It soon became obvious that the boat was not seaworthy in rough seas requiring them to be rescued by a steam ship. During the following year Felix invented a propeller governor for steam ships that was successfully tested by a company.

Charles Jackson, 'Fasting Felix', was living in America in November 1913 but then he disappeared off the radar to the general public. It appears he returned to Australia because he died at Merrylands, Sydney in 1943 and by then had fathered more than 12 children with at least three different women.

The watch was originally made without a bow. It was made to be mounted in a plastic holder on the side of a military field wireless set. The all brass case was originally finished in black paint. G.S./W.T. means 'General Service/ Wireless Telegraphy'. J.W.H./V stands for J.W.Hardie Co., a large and well known firm of jewelers. The 'V' means Victoria (Australia). The 'D/ND' mark is the Australian Defence Department marking, which was applied to nearly everything from boots to helmets. The 15 jewel Swiss movement was made by Montilier.
