$700

Ex Sir Arthur John Evans and R. Jameson Collections and subsequently acquired from Jean Elsen Sale 63 (lot 108) with his ticket. Sir Arthur John Evans (1851-1941), was an English archaeologist and numismatist. He was (1884-1908) keeper of the Ashmolean Museum at Oxford giving it many of his Greek coins. From 1900 to 1935 he conducted excavations on the Greek island of Crete, principally at Knossos, and there uncovered the remains of the previously unknown Minoan civilization. He devised a Minoan chronology spanning several thousand years that is still considered essentially accurate. Evans devoted considerable time and expense to the reconstruction of the most impressive feature of the civilization, the palace, at Knossos.

This was a period when the issues were crudely struck on small dumpy flans, the tripods particularly on the reverse were very crude. An interesting step in the evolution to the next series of eagles on the reverse as in the lot below.

same pair of dies (including this coin). The reverse die shows a breaking up and a similar example with the same degree of die-breaking occurs on Plate XX No.1q in RN 1956. Herzfelder in his extensive study on this coinage knew of only 19 examples of this coin from these dies of which 9 were from the same state of die deterioration. The two additional examples from the Randazzo Hoard makes 21 known pieces (Herzfelder lists the references of all the known examples). Many of the examples known are in public collections. For all dies Herzfelder was only able to find 46 coins of this type together with the four from Randazzo make only 50 surviving examples today. A most important coin with a superb pedigree.

Ex Gemini I, New York Sale, January 11-12, 2005 (lot 44) and previously Sternberg, Zurich, Auction Sale XX, 20 April 1988, (lot 395) This outstanding obverse die was signed by an artist who is otherwise unknown. G.K. Jenkins, Gulbenkian, p. 95, praised the composition as "balanced and dignified," noting that "the little eddy of dust rising beneath the horses' forelegs shows his mastery." The winged charioteer is perhaps the most supple of all the drivers depicted on Sicilian coinage. Another appealing feature of the die is the graceful yet slightly comical figure of Scylla pursuing a fleeing fish. This being Scylla's only appearance on Syracusan coinage, may allude to a defeat of the Athenian navy in the Straits of Messina. A most important coin known by Tudeer by only four examples for these dies.

The following is a comment that was appended below from the example of the same dies sold by NAC (Switzerland) in their Auction Sale 40 of May 16, 2007 (lot 242). It realised 60,000 SFr. "This superb tetradrachm of Syracuse offers us a coupling of dies of enchanting beauty. The artistic quality of its reverse is absolutely sublime and surely the work of a master-engraver who, even if he did not sign his works, he was in no way inferior to those who were wont to put their signatures on their dies. We believe that to him should be ascribed some of the best made Arethusa heads, and namely Tudeer nos. 41, 42, 43, 46, 47, 52. Among these, in our opinion the masterpieces are nos. 42, 43 and 47 that, for their enchanting beauty, stand out from the others and represent the highest achievement in the coinage of classical time. Also the obverse die is well done where the engraver not only succeeds with consummate skill in conveying the motion of the quadriga, but also gives us an unusual representation of the charioteer who faces the spectators and, with his right hand raised, seems to turn to the public to celebrate his victory after having overcome the meta. The scene, so far unpublished, is altogether rendered with uncommon plasticity and harmony." Unsigned dies probably by the artist Eukleidas one of the great master engravers of Greek coinage. Tudeer notes 6 specimens from these dies.

Ex Noble Numismatics Sale 60 (lot 1710). The issue was probably a commemorative issue on the occasion of Agathokles' daughter Lanassa's marriage to Pyrrhos of Epeiros in 297 B.C., the Epeirote character of this coin and the smaller denominations have led to this as being the principal suggestion. Alternatively it has also been suggested that the series could have been issued to honour Agathokles' assumption of the royal title in 304, reflected in the choice of Athena for the obverse type similar to that of Alexander the Great's gold coinage. The issue of these gold octobols was for only a brief time and indicated that the issue was certainly commemorative in nature.

Attis was the youthful consort of the great Anatolian mother goddess Cybele. The original Phrygian version of his myth (Pausanias vii, 10-12) is decidedly crude, involving the forcible castration of his father, incestuous longings and Attis' self-castration, a feature which came to characterize the priesthood of Cybele. Attis was a vegetation god whose death was mourned and annual resurrection celebrated, but in Greek times he seems to have shared in the actual worship of the cult of Cybele.

Ex Stephen Mulligan Collection Noble Numismatics Sale 64 (lot 2398) and previously from the Klaus Marowsky Collection, sold in Fritz Rudolf Kunker Auction sale No.54, March 7-8, 2000 (lot 1763, illustrated) for the first coin. Second coin from the Roman Connection with ticket. This was the largest struck bronze coin struck west of Egypt. It rarely appears for sale and almost all known examples are worn examples similar to this piece. The issue was the result of a monetary reform after 200 B.C. following the total and shattering defeat in the Second Punic War. The era saw the introduction of two new bronze issues, one of about 20 grams and the other the much rarer multiple unit of about 100 grams. The heavier multiple unit comes with two reverses one with the horse standing (as in this example) and another with the horse stepping to the right. They were both struck concurrently and these from very few dies suggesting a relatively short period of time for its issue. The lighter 20 grams examples were found in worn condition in the destruction stratum of 146 B.C. at Carthage indicating that this lighter issue were minted earlier in the century and that they had fifty years of circulation.

$200

Ex Jean Elsen, Belgium, Auction Sale 82 (lot 666). This interesting coin appears to be an original issue, but in actuality, it is an earlier issue that is restruck with two intricate 'countermarks.' These 'countermarks' were ring-shaped punch restriking of the legends that surround the obverse and reverse designs. While the obverse 'countermark-legend' is the same as that which appeared on the original striking, the reverse legend, originally ΕΠΙ ΑΡΧΙΕΡΕΩΣ ΑΛΕΞΑΝΔΡΟΥ ΚΛΕΩΝΟΣ ΣΑΡΔΙΑΝΟΥ, has been totally replaced by a new 'countermark-legend' as noted above.
